

Bangkok

Yaowarat before the rush

Thailand · Bangkok · Yaowarat

Hear a city gathering itself into a new day.

We want to hear Yaowarat in transition: the night city has not quite gone, while the morning city is starting to work. We plan to record that rhythm assembling layer by layer.

What we hope to hear

- Footsteps, voices and the first shops opening.
- Close alley sounds against distant traffic.
- The moment when separate sounds become the rhythm of a street.

The proposed journey

Listen first

Walk the proposed route with access, safety and respect for residents in mind.

Stay in one place

Make a sustained observation, letting the street change its own pace.

Show the context

Explain the choice of place. Individual stories and identifiable portraits need separate agreement.

Be part of the next morning

Support one expedition and help preserve the voice of a place. We will agree the format of your involvement with your team.

Expedition partner

RUB 30,000

Help make one journey possible and become part of its story.

- A logo and link on the selected expedition page.
- An acknowledgement in the final account of the journey.
- Agreed images and short texts to share through your channels.

Publication formats and material use are agreed before the start.

Lead partner

from RUB 150,000

Support the journey more broadly and tell a shared story about preserving the voices of places.

- Everything in the expedition partner package.
- Prominent placement on the trip page and in the final story.
- A dedicated piece about your support and jointly selected publications.

The final price depends on the agreed scope.

Where we begin

1. Email support@orna.land with the journey and form of involvement that interest you.
2. We will discuss your goals, the materials, timing and how to tell the story of your support.
3. We will record the agreed terms in a contract and begin the preparations.

Participation terms

Placements, timing, usage rights and advertising disclosures are agreed before work begins. Exclusivity and commercial licences are not included automatically. Final terms are recorded in the agreement.
